

Our approach to merger and acquisition support

The last three years have seen unprecedentedly high levels of M&A activity in the consulting and technology services space, especially where digital technology and transformation is concerned. However, while there appears to be many possible targets for a firm that's looking to bolster its capability via inorganic growth, it can be hard to find the right match for the right price.

Source Global Research helps potential buyers to find and qualify suitable targets for acquisitions and alliances. Some firms want our input from start to finish, but others want our help in very specific areas, preferring to do the rest of the work themselves. Firms use our services because we're knowledgeable (we specialise in researching the professional services sector and have a wide network of contacts backed up by extensive databases), independent, and fast.

